This is an agreement regarding the terms that are to apply for future intermittent employment. Intermittent employment means that the employee may be offered short employment periods during the agreed period above. This means that a new employment relationship is entered into on each separate occasion that the employee is called on to work and a specific employment decision is taken by the employer

The offer of such a form of fixed-term employment is on demand and the employee is entitled to accept or decline each offer. The employee is only employed during those days on which the employer and employee have agreed that the employee is to be called on to work.

The hourly wage is paid in the month after registration and approval of the time worked.

Annual leave is not scheduled during the employment – a holiday bonus of 12% is paid in addition to the agreed hourly wage.
